

Vuzix Doubles the Number of Compatible Vuzix Blade Smart Glasses Applications

ROCHESTER, NY, July 2, 2019 – Vuzix® Corporation (NASDAQ: VUZI), ("Vuzix" or, the "Company"), a leading supplier of Smart Glasses and Augmented Reality (AR) technology and products, today announced the expansion of supported Vuzix Blade Smart Glasses apps to more than 45 applications that run natively on the Blade representing a doubling of the number of available applications for customers over the last few months.

The Vuzix Blade Smart Glasses now supports a series of streaming and video platforms including Netflix, Amazon Prime Video, NBA, Roku, Spectrum TV, VLC and Ted Talks. News and weather platforms including AccuWeather, NY Times, Washington Post and Vuzix News are now supported. Web browsers such as Mozilla Firefox and Dolphin are now supported to provide internet web browsing capabilities. Social media platforms including Facebook Lite, WeChat, TikTok and Tumblr are now available for download. Applications such as Yelp, Yuge, Extractory and Mercari Lens Beta provide augmented reality shopping and restaurant experiences. Utility applications including DJI Drone, SiriusXM, Bubble Level, Doc Viewer, The Voice for Android, ScreenCastApp, Scoreboard and Spotify are now supported. See-what-I-see video applications for enterprises including Zoom, Remote Eye and Gemvision are supported by the Vuzix Blade Smart Glasses.

The Vuzix Blade App Development Contest is also off to a great start with over 85 entrants and the number is climbing daily. Contest submissions will be accepted until September 30, 2019 and a panel of judges from Vuzix, Verizon and other industry partners will be responsible for selecting the winners. "The ecosystem of applications supported by the Vuzix Blade continues to expand and we have a significant number of applications across several categories in queue that will continue to be added to the Vuzix App Store. The Vuzix Blade Smart Glasses featuring Vuzix' proprietary see-through optics technology packed into a lightweight and compact form factor continues to deliver digital content and experiences in the real world that have never been consumed through smart glasses before. From drone support to real-time language translation, these applications are exciting our customers across the markets in which they are being sold," said Paul Travers, President and Chief Executive Officer at Vuzix.
