Management Commentary

“In our second quarter, we made further progress on multiple product fronts: M-series smart glasses, Blade smart glasses and custom OEM projects,” said Paul Travers, President and CEO of Vuzix. “The Vuzix Blade, in particular, is rapidly evolving in terms of developer interest, functionality and broadening usage interest. On the financial side, we are making good progress on reducing and controlling our operating expenses as compared to prior periods. And with the capital raise completed in early July, we are now well positioned to fund both our product development and marketing needs into fiscal year 2020.”

Second Quarter 2019 Financial Results

For the three months ended June 30, 2019, total revenues decreased $0.5 million versus the comparable period in 2018. The overall reduction in sales of smart glasses products was driven by a combination of factors including the timing of the company’s largest smart glasses shipment to date at the end of June 2018, along with price reductions implemented during Q2 to the current M300 and M300XL products. Additionally, some customer order deferrals were observed in advance of the new and more powerful M400 Smart Glasses arriving later this summer. New shipments to OEM partner Dynabook did not fully offset this impact. Vuzix Blade Smart Glasses sales continued to accelerate in the second quarter of 2019 and represented 46% of Vuzix’ branded product sales. Engineering services revenue in the quarter was $0.4 million versus none in the prior year’s period.

There was an overall gross profit of less than $0.2 million for the three months ended June 30, 2019 as compared to a gross profit of $0.7 million for the same period in 2018. On a product cost of sales basis only, product direct costs were 76% of sales in the 2019 period as compared to 48% in the prior year's period, the increase resulting from lower margins on OEM smart glasses, as compared M-series products, and a price decrease implemented in May.

Research and Development (R&D) expense was $2.0 million for the three months ended June 30, 2019 compared to $2.6 million for the comparable 2018 period. The decrease in R&D expense was primarily the result of decreased use of external software contractors as compared to the 2018 period, when the Blade was still in active developments.

Selling and Marketing expense was $0.8 million for the three months ended June 30, 2019 compared to $1.5 million for the comparable 2018 period, a reduction of approximately 47%. The decline was primarily due to decreases in advertising, marketing and trade show spending and a decrease in salary, commissions, benefits and stock compensation expenses.

General and Administrative expense for the three months ended June 30, 2019 was $1.8 million versus $2.3 million in the prior year's period. The decline was primarily due to a decrease in salary, benefits and stock compensation related to staff reductions.

The net loss attributable to common stockholders after accrued preferred share dividends for the three months ended June 30, 2019 was $5.5 million or $0.20 cents per share versus a net loss of $6.6 million or $0.24 for the same period in 2018.

Net cash operating loss after adding back non-cash adjustments for the second quarter of 2019 was $4.0 million as compared to $5.0 million for second quarter of 2018 and down from $5.3 million in the first quarter of 2019.

Management Outlook

"We have increasing visibility and confidence internally that Vuzix will achieve multiple customer wins with significant revenue potential going forward and that this success will span our M-series smart glasses, Blade smart glasses and OEM opportunities," said Paul Travers, President and CEO of Vuzix. "Our products and technologies are second to none in form and functionality and this leadership position is well understood by our growing list of developers, our established partners and both existing and potential customers worldwide."
