The next generation of Skylight is the most significant product update in Upskill's history, and applies the lessons learned over the last 5 years of Skylight being in the market. This new release offers an even more scalable AR platform to support mass deployment of smart glasses across a global workforce, improves user interface to ease adoption, and adds capabilities that allow rapid creation of new Skylight Applications for faster return on investment and a lower total cost of ownership for customers.

"Over the last four years, Upskill has worked closely with Vuzix to deliver the leading industrial smart glasses solution to enterprise customers around the world," said Jay Kim, Chief Strategy Officer at Upskill. "Our latest Skylight release has been optimized for the M300, drastically shortening the time and money needed to operationalize augmented reality.”

“Upskill continues to be on the leading edge of solution providers for enterprise smart glasses,” said Paul Travers, President and CEO of Vuzix. “The next generation of Skylight optimized for the Vuzix M300 has the ability to have an immediate impact on the pace of adoption in the enterprise industry.”
